SANTA CLAUS IS COMING TO TOWN

PORTEVILLE, Nov. 28—Santa Claus is coming to town—but obviously, what with Main street Christmas decorations already up and lit, gift displays appearing in stores, and the annual Christmas parade, sponsored by the Merchants' committee of the Porterville chamber of commerce, set up for Saturday, December 7, at 10:30 a.m.

Five thousand invitations to participate in the parade have been sent out to school children in the area; first through sixth grade children are eligible; prizes for best costumes are being set up by the Merchants' committee, headed by Ben Cole.

Three bands will be in the parade—the Porterville High School Panther band, Lindsay elementary school, and Rockford school. Santa Clause, as is traditional, will lead the parade.

The parade will form at Cleve-

Band To Review

PORTEVILLE, Nov. 28—The Panther band of Porterville High school will face the toughest competition in the West when it enters the 23rd Annual Great Western Band review in Long Beach, Saturday. Directed by Buck Shaffer, the band marched last night in the Hollywood Christmas parade, and is playing a concert today in Disneyland.

THE COURSE of human events is often a violent, hateful tragic course. Such it was over the past weekend when the President of the United States John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Texas, on November 22 and within a period measured in minutes Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson took the oath of office in an airplane at the Dallas airport to become the new president. Sensational events continued with arrest of the suspected slayer, Lee Oswald, who in turn was killed by a Dallas night club owner, Jack Ruby, who now faces a murder charge. Untold millions of people throughout the world watched history being made, heard it being made and read about it as news agencies gave continuous and unprecedented four-day coverage through final rites for Mr. Kennedy, and into the early hours of Mr. Johnson's term as president. Still to come is the official investigation of what really happened in Dallas. Meanwhile, America moves on. The President is dead. Long live the President.

A SECTION of "packing house row" on E street in Porterville is shown in top photo as the 1963 crop of excellent Navel oranges begins to move. Lower photo is of about the same area at least 50 years ago. In the old car are believed to be J. H. Williams, Lee Shippey and W. H. Young. (If you can give us firm identification of these or of any others in photo, we would appreciate it.) While the new and old photos indicate considerable change through the years, one point has never changed—those Porterville Navel oranges are just the best eating oranges in the world. AMERICAN WAY: 1963

In the fond belief that the letter to the editor, the congressman, or even the mayor, is the American way of communication between private citizen and those holding some degree of public responsibility, a Chicago housewife recently wrote to the chief executive of that city protesting reports that the Soviet Union would soon open a consulate there.

The reply she received from an aide of the mayor was a rather upsetting commentary on some public officials' view of just what the American way really is. Said the reply: "As a matter of policy the city of Chicago accepts the fact that our federal government will take such action as is best for our country. Chicago accepts whatever action the federal government sees fit to take — that is the American way."

American way, our editorial eye! That's the totalitarian way. Respect for the authority of law is vital. But acceptance as fact that whatever government does is automatically best for us is characteristic only of people made voiceless by governmental usurpation of their rights.

Last March, California's Kaiser Steel Corporation plant at Fontana inaugurated a unique plan to cut operating costs, with the employees sharing in the savings.

As explained by Board Chairman Edgar F. Kaiser, the plan is "not in any sense a profit-sharing plan. It is a sharing of savings that would not be generated if the plan were not in effect."

How has the plan worked out during its first six-months trial period?

In interviews with both workers and management, U. S. News & World Report finds that to date, at least, the plan is an unqualified success.

"The Greatest Thing"

One union leader reported: "I think the whole plan is the greatest thing that's come down the road in a long, long time."

According to a superintendent: "The workers are a bunch of capitalists now. They have become aware of what materials and supplies cost. They are running their units tighter. They know there is a great reward for skill."

The plan seeks the cooperation of employees in helping management cut costs and increase efficiency. Jobs are protected as efficiency increases and workers are given extra pay for the months in which costs are reduced.

Workers receive 32.5 per cent of the savings — a small portion in fringe benefits, but mostly in cash.

From March to August, the average cash payment to each worker totalled $455.00. About 4500 employees are covered in the plan.

Total savings amounted to $6,045,000, of which the employees received $2,103,000. The company's share was $3,942,000.

Higher Average Earnings

Including cash payments under the cost-savings plan, the average production worker in the Fontana plant earned $3.70 per hour, compared with average earnings of about $3.40 in the rest of the steel

CANTALOUP ORDER IS TERMINATED

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 28 — State Director of Agriculture Charles Paul has announced the termination of the Marketing Order for California cantaloupes, as amended.

The termination is a result of a petition by more than 51 per cent of cantaloupe handlers who handled more than 51 per cent of all cantaloupes regulated under the Marketing order. The area covered by the Marketing order includes principally the counties of Fresno, Merced, Stanislaus, Kings, Tulare, Kern and Los Angeles.

BATTI HOLSTEIN TOPS ASSOCIATION

VISALIA, Nov. 28 — A grade Holstein owned by Batti Bros. of Tulare, topped the Tulare County Dairy Herd Improvement association for the month of October with a production record of 20,536 pounds of milk and 796 pounds of butterfat during a 305-day lactation period.

In a report to a U. S. Senate Committee, a joint Kaiser-union statement reported these examples of savings effected under the plan:

"In one situation, crane crews who used to discard 300-foot cables when they broke are now carefully salvaging these in 50-foot lengths for use on smaller cranes.

"In other instances, spare parts, nuts, bolts and other items that used to be discarded as a matter of course are now being salvaged and re-used."

The Kaiser plan has been heralded as revolutionary, and is being carefully studied by other companies. But its essence seems to be merely the old fashioned aphorism: "waste not, want not."

NEW BOOKS AT PORTERVILLE CITY LIBRARY

Allen Drury is known widely for his two novels, ADVISE AND CONSENT, and a SHADE OF DIFFERENCE. Now we have his first non-fiction work, and exceedingly interesting it is. A SENATE JOURNAL is an account of Mr. Drury's first years in Washington, as a reporter assigned to the U.S. Senate. It covers the years 1943-45, and is the day-by-day journal of a reporter with sharp eyes, an acute ear, and a knack for description and characterization. We sit at ring-side for many of the battles of those days, the Man-Power Conscription bill, — "D" day — and an election year when the issue of a fourth term was being bitterly contended. We watch the last months of Roosevelt, with influence slipping steadily away, and the taking over of Harry Truman. Bob Taft walks the pages, with Barkley, Connelly, and many more. This is not an exposé, but an honest account of things seen and studied by a very keen mind. Here and there the author interpolates comments from the vantage point of twenty years later, but most of it is just as it seemed to him at that time. This is a valuable historical document.

We do not often review a play in these columns, but LORD PENDGO, by Samuel N. Behrman, should receive mention. Ten years ago Mr. Behrman wrote a biography of the great art dealer, Lord Duveen. The play built around that character has been on the New York stage this past winter, and has now come out in book form. We watch this unbelievable man as he goes about his business of extracting outrageous sums from more or less willing victims. The play is a delight to read, as it must be to see.

A book that has aroused public opinion as no other has in many weeks, is Jessica Mitford's THE AMERICAN WAY OF DEATH. Skyrocketing to the top of the best seller list most unexpectedly, it has astonished and thrilled its author. A quotation from Oscar Wilde could well have been included, "It seems I am dying beyond my means", but Miss Mitford chose one from the Funeral Director's association, and it is quite perfect. "Funerals", announced Mr. Raether, executive secretary, "are becoming more and more a part of the American way of life." Miss Mitford's book may help us to move toward that maturity in regard to death, which marks a society as truly civilized.

We don't believe in advertising Christmas gifts until after Thanksgiving, so if you receive this before Thursday, please don't read further. However if it is now Friday, please continue to the very end.

We have a limited number of fine living Christmas trees which the rest of the year are called Deodar trees. These can be kept indoors for a few days during Christmas, then planted outside for many years of enjoyment. They are graceful, tall growing trees that contribute much to the sky line of our city.

Other living Christmas trees, such as the smaller varieties of Spruce, will soon be in from the fields. If you wish a smaller tree, these are shorter to begin with and much slower growing than the Deodar. A truly pretty tree they will always add a rich look to your yard. You are welcome to come by if only to gaze upon their beauty.

These and other plants we would be glad to set aside and hold until you're ready at Christmas time. There are many that might be just right for friends that have everything else. There are other plants suited for small remembrances. Come have a look.

Season's farm finances arranged in one visit

The cost of spraying 300 acres of cotton was only one of the worries a farmer friend of ours had. In the season ahead, payments on cotton-picking machinery would be necessary. Important work around the farm would have to be done, and there were major repairs on two heavy trucks and a tractor. And all of this would come in addition to the payments on a Crocker-Citizens loan which had helped him purchase some additional acreage.

Things stood this way when Maynard Stack, a hard-working farmer with an excellent record of achievement, visited his Crocker-Citizens bank. He had with him an operating budget for the coming season, and now he and his Crocker-Citizens farm banker sat down together to review it.

During this brief meeting, it was recommended that Mr. Stack get another loan to take care of all his seasonal requirements. Arrangements for the loan were promptly completed.

The Crocker-Citizens farm banker often can make such loans without the delay of referring them to a headquarters bank for approval. In fact, within just a few days after Mr. Stack's meeting at Crocker-Citizens, the money he needed had been deposited in his Crocker-Citizens checking account.

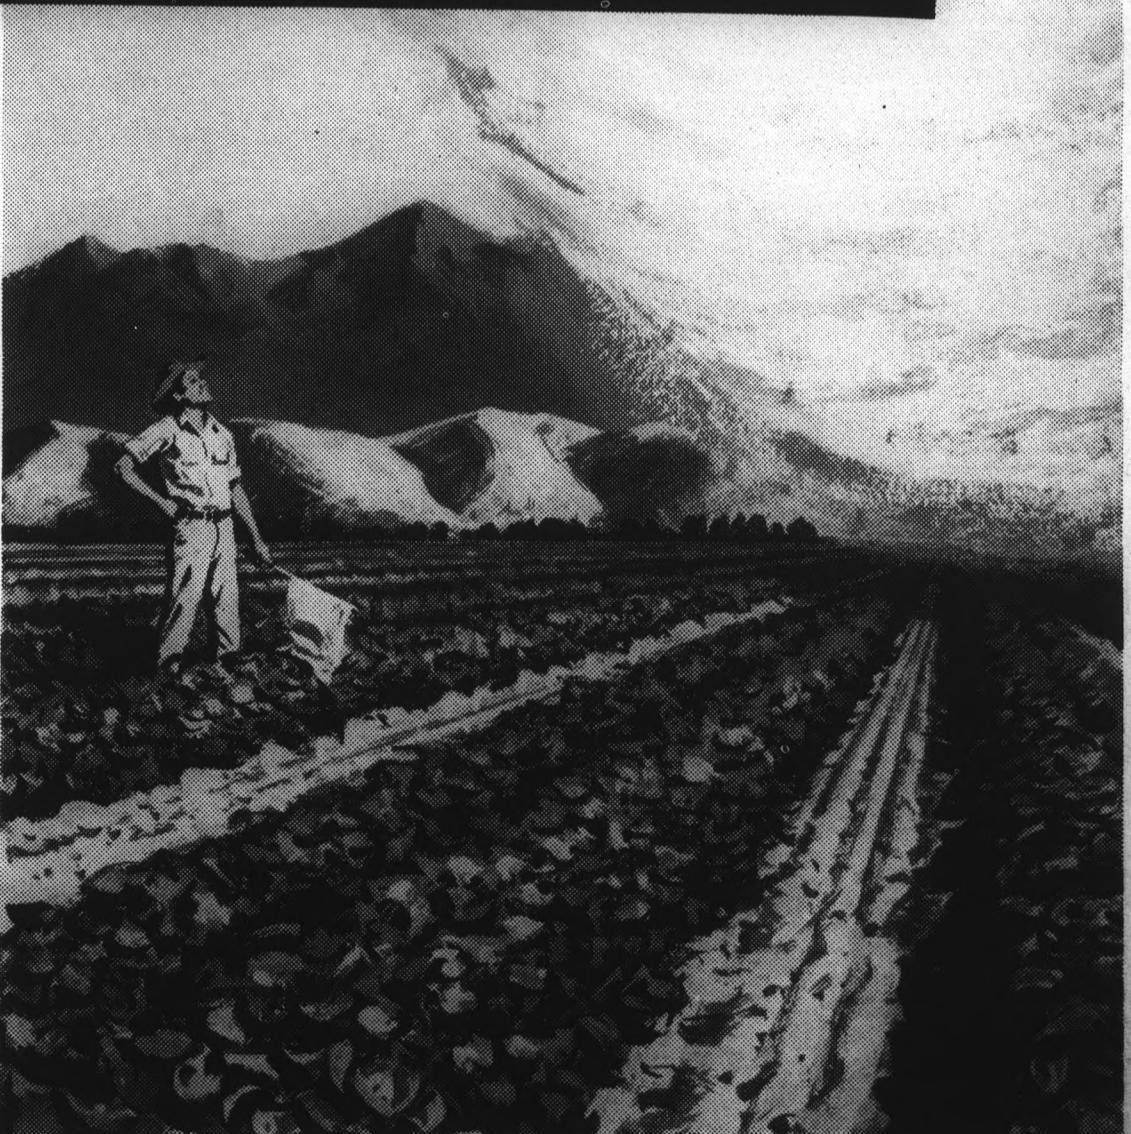

Eldon R. Campbell, one of Crocker-Citizens' farm bankers, grew up on a ranch, studied animal husbandry at Utah State University. He joined Crocker-Citizens after 22 years with the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, is V.P. in charge of agricultural loans at the bank's Capital Office in Sacramento.

CHAPEL CHIMES

By Rev. N. J.
Thompson

The mesquite seems to take the prize for digging its way underground. This rugged desert bush is able to push roots through sand and gravel to a depth of 100 feet, according to research scientists at UCLA. A pine root measuring four inches in diameter can move a weight of 50 tons!

In His teachings, Jesus emphasized the importance of roots. In His parable of the sower, our Lord spoke of seed falling on stony ground. "Because it had no root, it withered away" (Matthew 4:6).

Curiously enough, St. Mark's gospel repeats this parable — in exactly the same words!

Luke elaborates a little on the parable. After explaining that the seed is the Word of God, Luke states: "They on the rock are they which, when they hear, receive the Word with joy; but these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away" (Luke 8:13).

Why does the Bible record this parable three different times?

SPRINGVILLE DUMP HOURS ANNOUNCED

SPRINGVILLE, Nov. 28—Beginning this week the County Dump on State Highway 190 approximately two miles below Springville, will be closed on Mondays and on Christmas Day but will be open on all other days from 7:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. for the duration of standard time.

Simply to emphasize the importance of the message. The message is, that some people who receive the Gospel "with joy" are, unfortunately, only impressed superficially. The Gospel fails to penetrate their hearts deeply; the seed (God's Word) lies shallow, rootless. Consequently, when tribulation or temptation attacks, all promise of fruit from the good seed quickly withers away.

Perhaps the reason for so many "rootless" (and fruitless) Christians is because we have so many rootless people. We are constantly on the move, flitting hither and yon, seeking a better job, new friends, or gentler climate. More than three and a half million Americans changed their addresses last year!

Spiritual roots are important. That's why the Bible exhorts us to be "rooted and grounded in Christ, and established in the faith" (Colossians 2:7).

John Corzine, manager of the Paul Bunyan restaurant, has offered facilities for the dinner, and Howard Smith of Smith's Complete Market, will contribute the turkeys to be carved and served at each table.

Ticket sellers for the 6:30 p.m. event are Charles Aldine, Don Bendowski and Dr. Shelton.

LIFE IN WEST PAKISTAN RECOUNTED IN LETTER FROM RUTH OLSON, A FORMER RESIDENT OF PORTERVILLE

(Ed. note: The following letter is from Ruth Olson, who, with her husband, Ray, is now in Jhelum District, Mangla, West Pakistan, where Ray is working on the Mangla Dam project.)

Dear folks,

Since I'm so far behind in answering your wonderful letters, I'm making several copies of this one. I realize that some people don't like carbon copies, but when I have to write the same thing to many, let's say I become lazy. It really isn't that at all, but the time involved.

A few weeks ago after the men came in from work and had time to change clothes and have a cup of coffee, two cars left for Murree (Murray) which is 7,000 ft. elevation, in the lower Himalayas. The trip to Rawalpindi was much more beautiful compared to the first trip we made. The grass has come up, the crops are growing like weeds, and all the trees as well as the shrubs are bright green. The monsoons have made this country a different world than the one I entered in July.

Being early in the morning gave a chance to see the natives as they sleep or go about their morning chores. Those who were going to the fields, carried the wooden plow while driving their buffalo to the plot of ground they farm. Even though there aren't old cars that need gasoline, there must be other foes abroad during the wee small hours of the night! Hence, he takes no chance of losing his much needed possession — the plow.

Along the way there are canyons like our Garden of the Gods made so by erosion and often the walls show colors like the Painted Desert. This country can grow on one and soon he would begin to accept it as the natives do. (I imagine they don't think anything about the beauty of the scenery for they are far too busy making a living out of the soil.)

We stopped in Pindi for breakfast. This time we went to Flashman's, but I still like the other place called Chezons. (Shezons) We had juice, sausages (I'm sure they were beef), eggs, marmalade, and toast. One soon learns to ask for scrambled eggs. They don't know how to cook an egg over easy. It is called double fried and often it is too much fried. Every meal is served in courses and you must be sure that you have a good grip on your plate or the waiter may have it in the kitchen before you have taken your last bite. The above mentioned places are the only two where we feel free to eat the food and drink the water in Rawalpindi.

After breakfast we took off for the high country. The road is good — wider than the one to Nelson's. But I still haven't accustomed myself to the left hand side of the road. As we climbed, we found every mountainside terraced, with corn growing on the flat places. This is the main crop for these people. They dry it and pound it into flour for the winter use. The crops are well cared for, in fact more so than one would expect to find in the mountainous regions. I couldn't help but think how much more of our land could be used if we were willing to work as hard and live with as little.

With all the hardships they must bear, the people are a happy lot. Along the way we noticed governmental stations where different vegetables were being raised under certain conditions. Even nurseries for shrubs and trees were seen. A very tall pine grows on the mountains. All the lower limbs are cut off so that fire hazards are about nil. All dead limbs and anything which could help fires spread are not in evidence. In fact we saw where the pine needles are used. All the roofs of the mountain homes are made of wooden beams covered with mud mixed with the pine needles. Nothing goes to waste in this country.

We checked in at the Cecil Hotel where we had reservations. One suite was ready, but we had to wait for the other one. We two ladies left the men to sleep for a few hours and with our bearer went to the Mall, the market. It is on several levels for this is mountainous country. Neither cars nor carts are permitted on this street so we walked safely along.

As we neared the Mall, we heard a pipe organ playing in a large old stone church. We couldn't find the name but we recognized the old hymns being played and sung.

There were beautiful materials in the shops — saris, furs, copper, and at one place we watched an old man drawing pictures on cloth with wax that was stuck to the year; his wife joining him last July. Photo shows crews for two 150 B's electric shovels, same kind of shovels used on Success Dam. There are six base of his thumb. The heat from the body kept the wax at the right temperature. This is almost a forgotten art. He colors it after the design is completed and sometimes he adds gold or silver. He showed us handkerchiefs, scarfs, and several other things he had completed.

When we returned to the Hotel, the men were awakened and we left by car to our bearers' homes. Before they left on leave, they had asked us to bring our knives and forks as we were to have lunch at their home. They use their fingers instead of our equipment. You would think that they would absorb the way of English or Americans while they work for them, but tradition of the past generations prevail.

After a few miles (we were nearing the 8,000 ft. level) we came to the end of the road. There we found a beautiful new rest house. People go there to stay as we do in the States for a vacation. Here you may take your own bearer to do the cooking and to look after your wants. Or, you can hire one there. This is done in a good many vacation spots in this country. Well, we started out on the trail following our bearer who, like all his family is a "mountain goat". He did slow up for us when we told him that many years had passed since we had done any of this mountain climbing.

The trail led for several miles — up and down — through pine covered country. About a mile before we reached the homes, a young boy was waiting to carry the word that we were nearing the end of our journey. From then on we were watched from well above the trail by other young members of the family. They really wanted to look us over before we arrived. Soon a few of the women-folk appeared and let me say that the language barrier doesn't exist when you are truly welcome. I was the first in line after the bearer and when the wife of the other one came to me, I can tell you that I was hugged in a vise-like embrace. What she said,

The house to which we were taken, belonged to the uncle who works for our friends. The house has two rooms and the third one

BE REQUESTED IF NOT RECEIVED

VISALIA, Nov. 28 — Tax collections for the first three weeks in November show a heavy initial response to the approximately 72,000 tax bills mailed by Tulare County Tax Collector J. A. Janelli. Janelli expressed his appreciation of those taxpayers who have responded so promptly.

The fact that several hundred bills were returned because of insufficient or incorrect addresses is still of great concern to the tax collector. Property owners should request bills on their property, if not yet received, as soon as possible.

A penalty of six percent of the first installment tax will be levied on all unpaid taxes as of 5 o'clock p.m. on the 10th day of December. Payments must be made at the Tax Collector's office in the County Civic Center, at Visalia, by 5:00 p.m. on December 10, or must be deposited in the mail by midnight on the same date, to avoid the penalty.

Janice Buchak, Jamie and Jackie Lunstad were among those receiving awards at County Awards night in Visalia recently.

Traffic accidents took the lives of 2,780 jaywalkers in the United States last year.

RUTH OLSON LETTER

is for the buffalo cow. A curtain separated the porch into two parts. We were not asked beyond the curtain. We were served tea while sitting on chairs. Where they came from no one knows and we didn't show poor manners by asking then or later. We were introduced to all the adult members and to those children who were brave enough to present themselves. When dinner was ready, we were ushered into the one room nearest us and sitting in the same chairs as before, were served a most delicious meal that had been cooked over an outside fire like our campfires we use in the high country. First came the soup which is always served. Then baked chicken, rice pilau (not at all like ours) and peas. For dessert we had orange rice. (I believe it must have had saffron to make the color.) It had walnuts, raisins, and coconut slices in it. That meal could have been served a king or queen and been appreciated. No child remained to peek into the room while we were eating nor did anyone attempt to do so. When the last course was finished, the adults and a few children came in to chat just as we do at home. Yes, there was interpreting going on, but there are always things the eyes and voice inflections convey one to the other.

When we took our leave, the active members followed us a short distance before bidding us "Good-bye". We climbed out over some of the same trail and reached the cars about an hour before sunset.

I must tell about Ray and his Polaroid. He took pictures of the family, being quite surprised that that the women were willing to be photographed. When the timid little ones found they could see themselves, Ray did a land office business. Next time he will take colored slides for us. He left the pictures with the family.

These families have lived in the Himalayan foothills for generations. Yes, 8,000 feet is considered the foothills here because there are many peaks over 20,000 feet, you will remember. The houses are perched on the steep sides and how they remain there is a puzzle. The view is tremendous. All the terraced hillsides below were like a painting. The different greens caused many Oh's and Ah's. Ray even said he would be able to take that location and like it. We tried to see the higher mountains on our way back, but the clouds were covering the snow-capped peaks.

MOTOR HOTEL IN BAKERSFIELD BEING CONSTRUCTED BY ROSS BOYD AS FIRST OF ITS TYPE IN AREA

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 28 — Ground has been broken on the Downtowner Inn, a three story downtown motor hotel, the first of its type ever constructed in this area. Construction is by owner-builder, Ross Boyd of Porterville.

Located at Chester avenue and 13th street, the new Inn follows a national trend to build moderate and luxury guest accommodations in the downtown area. It marks the first guest accommodations built in downtown Bakersfield in more than three decades.

Designed by the Bakersfield architectural firm of Eddy & Paynter, AIA, the Downtowner Inn will feature a Contemporary Mediterranean style of architecture.

Plans call for rooms only on the second and third floor, with the ground floor utilized for the lobby, and guest parking. A decorative grill wall shields the parking area from the street, and the upper floors provide protection from sun and weather.

An innovation planned for the Downtowner Inn is drive-in registration with a drive-in window similar to a bank.

A large sun deck with tropical landscaping is planned for the second floor. Also planned is a cozy coffee lounge for guests.

Inn rooms will have individual air conditioning control, television, wall-to-wall carpeting, special direct-dial telephone system, individual heating control, floor-to-ceiling glass walls, and a special dressing alcove.

The exterior of the new motor hotel will feature imported European tile combined with handmade adobe veneer giving a Contemporary Mediterranean effect.

"There is a definite need for a modern downtown motor hotel which is within easy walking distance of the civic center and downtown," Eddy said. Boyd owns adjacent property which will be developed in the future to include restaurant, banquet facilities and additional rooms," he said. "The project has been master planned with this in mind."

Boyd said he expects to complete construction and have the Downtowner Inn open for guests some time this spring.
